

With regard to the results of neutron activation analyses, at first it was falsely claimed that I'd said I didn't want any such records. ~~Then it was said that I had said that I wanted 1,000 pages.~~

Before any records were provided, the FBI's internal records include one from a file in which he estimates the total number of pages at 1,000. Thereafter, in supposedly full compliance, I was given 54 pages. A separate file, consisting of copies of these 54 pages, was established. (62-109060-7211.) As I continued to press the FBI it found more, if still far from that thousand pages. On June 4, 1975 a separate file of copies of 73 pages is recorded in the worksheets of the general JFK assassination releases. (62-109060-7201) what ~~Then it was said that I had said that I wanted 1,000 pages.~~ Inconsistency in the FBI ~~testimony in the deposition~~ states, as with the four contradictory versions of the testing of the windshield specimen, Q15, is not exceptional. Less than 10 percent of the admitted number of pages had been provided by the time of the June 18, 1981 ^{a/} ~~deposition~~ deposition, more than six and a half years after the renewed request. And throughout this long period the FBI has continued to claim compliance, although it has not yet complied.
